IN THIS EDITION:

Seeking National Family History Month Coordinator

Seeking AFFHO Web Master!

Joan Reese Short Story Competition opens!

New Nick Vine Hall Award criteria announced!

VALE ROSEMARY

It was with saddened hearts that AFFHO heard of the sudden passing of our President, Ms Rosemary McKenzie, in October. Rosemary was a passionate advocate of family history, a tireless leader of AFFHO, a devoted mother and friend, and an explorer of travel, board games, fashion, and technology.

The Council expresses its deepest sympathies to Rosemary’s family, friends, Family History Australian Capital Territory (HAGSOC) colleagues, and to any of the wider family history community who knew her.

AFFHO NOTICES

The next Newsflash is scheduled for 1 March 2023. Please send contributions, events, and reminders to editor@affho.org

NICK VINE HALL AWARDS 2024

As we get towards the end of 2023, it is time to think about which of your 2023 journals or newsletters you want to submit to the judges.

There are a few changes to previous years.

Firstly, due to declining society membership numbers, the categories have been amended.

Category A – for societies with less than 200 members

Category B – for societies with 200 or more members

Secondly, all submissions are in a digital format and are to be submitted by 30 April 2024.

Thirdly, we have three new judges for the 2024 Awards:

- Rachel Croucher VIC
- Sandra Hayward WA
- Therese Lynch ACT

All are professional members of the Association of Professional Genealogists and bring a variety of experiences and skills to the judging panel.

Fourthly, the revised criteria for judging and information on nominating is on the AFFHO website.

I look forward to receiving all your nominations next year. Any questions please contact me.

The Joan Reese Memorial Short Story Competition

The Joan Reese Memorial Short Story Competition recognizes the contribution of Joan Reese in the significant provision of access to NSW Colonial records and her support of GSQ and its members over many years. The winning stories appear in subsequent issues of the Society's quarterly journal Generation.

The topic for the Joan Reese Memorial Short Story Competition in 2024 is 'A short story from your family history research'.

We discover many interesting stories when researching our family history. These stories may relate to an individual ancestor, an event which impacted on our ancestors' lives or how we solved a mystery or overcome a brickwall. Share your story with the readers of Generation. What was its significance to your family and your research? This should be clearly explained.

The prize for the winning entry is $200 and GSQ looks forward to reading your stories. See the GSQ website for the conditions of entry. www.gsq.org.au/gsq-events/writing-competition.

Closing date for receipt of entries: 3 June 2024

Anyone requiring further information should address enquiries to Pauline Williams at info@gsq.org.au.

Swing-Rioters

Under the Southern Cross

In the winter of 1830-31, thousands of men and women in southeast England took part in the Swing Riots – the greatest machine-breaking episode in English history. The riots were a protest against the living conditions of the agricultural labourers. They were accompanied by demands for money, acts of arson and especially the breaking of threshing machines and other implements that threatened their livelihood.

The government quickly clamped down on these protestors, with the result that some 355 were transported to Van Diemens Land and 149 to New South Wales. While some returned to England after emancipation, many stayed and raised families in Tasmanian and New South Wales. A significant number also moved from Tasmania to settle in Victoria.

The late Geoffrey Sharman left behind years of research into the Swing-rioters and the Hobart Branch of the Tasmanian Family History Society Inc. has published this work. You can find it on the branch's website here:
www.hobart.tasfhs.org/swing-rioters/riots_index.php.

Each swing-rioter has a statistical page and some have more detailed individual histories. Descendants of those who established families in Australia are invited to contribute to this on-going work by adding the story of their individual swing-rioter.

Genealogy SA is proud to present a full-day seminar delivered by two international experts in Irish research from the Ulster Historical Foundation, Gillian Hunt and Fintan Mullan. The seminar will cover key genealogical records for the whole island of Ireland.

Featuring a broad range of topics, the seminar will include many aspects of Irish & Scots-Irish research including church records, townlands & land records, workhouse records and much more.

Join us for this rare opportunity to hear, in Adelaide, these international experts in the field of Irish family history research.

Helping find your family history

Western Australia is scattered with the remains of abandoned settlements. Many West Australians once lived in the boom and bust mining towns of the goldfields, worked on the vast railway network that covered much of the state, laboured cutting and sawing timber in the forests of giant trees, carved out lives on small farms in Soldier Settlements, or lived in sleepy towns that serviced far-flung farming communities.

Towns that were once thriving are now deserted and, in many cases, little if anything remains.

2029 will mark two significant milestones for Western Ancestor readers – the Bicentenary of European settlement of Western Australia and the 50th anniversary of FHWA. To mark these events, the Society (FHWA) has launched a project to collect everything we can find about the people who lived in these ghost towns of Western Australia, so their stories are not forgotten.

This is a massive project as multiple primary and secondary sources need to be examined and indexed for more than 530 ghost towns! If you would like to volunteer your time, please visit:
